Duiguid marker placed

On June 18 of this year Mr. and Mrs. John Diuguid of Sykesville, Md., along with their son and grandson, three generations of Diuguids, witnessed the placing of a brass bar emblem at the base of the grave of George Duiguid.

It was in the fall of 1982 that John Duiguid contacted the Lynchburg Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of American Revolution to have his ancestor's grave marked with a DAR marker. He contacted the Lynchburg Chapter because in his research on George Duiguid, he found that a Miss Mabel Davidson of Appomattox had joined the Lynchburg Chapter in 1916 as a descendant of George Duiguid and his wife, Nancy Sampson Duiguid.

According to Miss Davidson's papers, Private George Duiguid took part in the battle of Blandford near Petersburg, 1781 and was wounded in the knee and was compelled to use crutches for as long as he lived. He died September 10, 1832.

John Duiguid located the grave of his ancestor with the help of Duiguid Funeral Home in Lynchburg and Mr. C. R. Carson, of Concord. The Duiguid family cemetery on the Barry Jones farm, west of Concord, on County Road 757.

Present for the ceremony in addition to three generations of Duiguids were Mrs. John Mohr, Regent, Mrs. Howard Rhodes, Vice-regent of the DAR, Mrs. A. W. Harvey, Mrs. Nancy Wright, Mrs. W. Goode Robinson and Mrs. R. Wayland Rice.

In Unit One of the Fourth Grade text students are given the opportunity to imagine what life in a lighthouse was like for lighthouse children in the 19th century. Students have researched famous lighthouses, written original cartoons using unit vocabulary words and made replicas of their own.
